114	Nancy Ganz Lindley, CTC	I totally agree that these MLM's have got to stop. Many of us have worked for years (29 for me) and have worked in gaining knowledge and experience, client base, and the professionalism that any reputable business should have. Why do these so called agents travel so much? Because they are in it only for the benefits and are not working the business. If a person can get higher commissions on their one and only sale, which is their own trip, get client upgrades just because they pay a monthly fee then it is certainly the time to have everyone look at the model of travel. My education and experience alone should be enough vs those get rich quick schemes and those who are in it for only the benefits. 261	Christine Whitaker	I urge ASTA, NACTA and other industry associations to finally begin to speak out on our behalf. YTB and others like them are a blight to the industry. When suppliers and industry associations fail to recognize these businesses for what they are it cheapens the industry. Agents work hard for their earned credentials unlike those who have paid a price to gain a website for free perks. It is obscene to see our industry go down this path unchecked.	Discover Your World Travel
262	Luanne Lane	I have over 20 years of experience in the corporate travel world. Legitimate travel agents truly love what we do and realize what it takes to help our mutual clients get the most from their travel experience. We, as a concerned travel community, want you to seriously reconsider extending benefits and courtesies to MLM (YTB) types of "travel agents". If you understand MLM and really think about this, these people are simply "using you" the vendor for their own gain. Chances are they won't even ever sell travel, so why in the world would you extend a travel agent discount to someone who claims to be a travel agent? I see no value to our vendors at all by working with these types of organizations. People who are in this business just so they can "travel" are not the types of travel agents most agencies want to hire, so why would you?? Thank you for your time in considering our petition. Then he told me YTB provided him NO training - but he paid his $499.00 and is now a "travel agent". I am very disappointed that this card mill scheme has remerged. The industry needs to put an end to this scheme for good.
345	Jeff Grieder	Not only do the MLM "Travel Agents" cheapen the travel industry, they also take advantage of the travel industry. I see these "agents" at local events all the time. They have no problem telling you why they attend as well. I was told by one MLM Agent recently at a supplier function that they were only there for the free food and to win the door prizes. So I ask the suppliers and vendors... is the really the kind of "travel agents" you want for travel partners????!!	ASAP Cruise Vacations

Its a shame when we the travel agent community attend seminars and find many "so called" travel agents attending them for the freebies, and then there are those of us who are looking for the updates and promotions that are upcoming for the industry. Maybe the cruise lines and Land Operators can make it harder to register for their seminars so they get the proper audience they need. 695	Judy Cilla	I have been an outside agent for 15 years and have seen much discussion regarding the MLM - Card Mills or whatever you wish to call them. They are a disgrace to the industry and no supplier should do business with them. I have worked full time and received my IATA card the first year after I started. Credibility in this industry is difficult enough to maintain with out providing credentials to those who only see it as an opportunity to travel. Frankly There is a lot that needs to be cleaned up in this industry and shutting down the MLMs is a start.	Journeys Unlimited

705	Linda Sadlowski,	As President of SSTP, an organization comprised of more than 140 travel professionals, I applaud RCCL for stepping up and taking a stand to no longer do business with card mills and their associates. We at SSTP have been trying for more than a year to get vendors as well as seminar organizers to put a stop to this influx of 'travel agent wannabes'. It's shameful the way these card-mill associates 'storm' seminars, swooping up food, giveaways and whatever else they can grab. SSTP will be drafting a petition as well, signed by its members, and calling for vendors to cease doing business with card mill companies and their affiliates. We must stand together and our message to the vendors must be strong; no more card mills.	Jetway World Travel, President, South Suburban Travel Professionals

708	Jody Barbato	It's about time and I applaud Royal Caribbean!! I do want to make note that I went onto one of the websites of a YTB agent and as of today, Oct. 12, 2007, Royal Caribbean cruises still come up to select from and purchase a cruise. Also, land based tours operators: Apple Vacations, Travel Impressions and Rockwell Tours make up their suppliers list.. My suggestion would be to support and book through those tour operators that do not support YTB and the like.	My Honeymoon Specialist

The RTA's represent themselves as true agents at all local events, and their presence at ASTA's "The Trade Show" in their bright green shirts that read "Ask Me How You Can Travel For Free!" and trying to not only recruit travel agents but also the suppliers at their tables and during presentations to purchase YTB websites is a disgrace. Many agents for a long time have been resisting any kind of travel agent licensing employing standards we generate ourselves. What we get is ridiculous bonding requirements. 790	Douglas Shachnow CTC CTIE MCC DSs	I know this is a second entry, but I noticed one important item from Scott Holland (#189). MLMs are the things that make the public dislike agents in general, even the qualified ones. This is the truth. I also see others commenting "stop this practice". Well, the truth is that no one can stop this practice but us. The suppliers are interested in making money, and you can't blame them for selling to whoever comes to them with a sale. If we're going to put an end to MLMs, we have to take matters into our own hands, and establish the standards that make an agent a "professional" and make these standards known to the general public. To rephrase a line from Karl Marx: Travel agents of the world Unite! We've got nothing to lose but the MLMs!. And that wouldn't be much of a loss; it would be a major gain. I often call calls from YTB's clients who are lost and without real guidance. She received 28 "opportunity" letters promising her HUGE commissions on air bookings - ALL from YTB members. We investigated each one to see where they were from. Now, we're afraid to allow one of us to be quoted in a trade magazine again for fear of having these ruthless MLM'ers beating on our door and flooding our inboxes. When we asked them specific questions just to test them on their knowledge, not a one could answer but several promised to "get back to you on that." Enough said.

912	Beth Miller Augerinos, CTC, CEO	I have been in the travel agency business for over 30 years, and until the last 10, I have never seen our industry and our knowledge so decimated by the so called card mill travel agents. They are like locust and cheapen our profession. The majority know less about travel and could care less about the profession. They are in it to travel more cheaply, show up at trade shows trying to get more people to join, and further confuse the general public who still does not seem to know the benefits of using a REAL travel consultant Unfortunately I have had calls from clients who have used a card mill agent, a coworker, a neighbor, a friend of a friend, a relative, some one in their social club or church, the list goes on. In many cases the experience was was disappointing and now they want full proof from me that I am a long standing agent. Thanks to these "fake" agents, our whole industry has suffered. 920	Sandra Boring	I am also in the real estate business and on October 16, the Corporate Broker of my real estate company, was promoting YTB as another source of income for the slow market in real estate. One of the Realtors of my office handed me her YTB card and asked me to sign up, as it was a great deal for saving money to travel. I told her I was already in the travel business - and that it was frowned upon in the travel industry for this type of business (MLM). She didn't of course care. She also said after asking her how she handles her bookings, that once she books a trip - her customer has to deal directly with the company she books with if there are any problems in wanting to change or cancel their bookings. It was very upsetting to me to see our Corporate Broker promoting YTB. So I have not wanted to be around the hype of this office. Its very upsetting to hear other Realtors talk about this program. 1429	Laurell	Being a travel agent has all ways been a dream and a serious passion. In June 2007 I began researching th field of travel and what is required. and after spending months I was torn between two different host agencies, but before making my decision I was also approached by a YTB agent. After hearing her sales speech I was convinced that it sounded too much like a pyramid and I was not interested. I did choose a host agency and spent the last month training. I have completed Carnival and Royal Caribbean's travel agent courses and earned certificates. I also completed through Travel Agent Academy Cancun, BVI, Destination Wedding Specialist, Bahamas, Dominican Republic, Couples Resort and I have begun Princess and Cunard certificate programs. I have subscribed to every (and I mean every) online and print magazine, as well as any other organization that provieds me with education that is needed to stay ahead. I have also begun the ACC certificate through CLIA. I am serious about this business of travel.	Dream Destinations by Laurell

1801	Marian	How 'bout going after World Ventures? On the website, their co-founder Wayne Nugent's profile even proclaims him to be "the most passionate evangelist for Network Marketing as the premier distribution channel of leisure travel." Network marketing IS MLM. Yes, you too, can instantly become a travel agent for $400 registration, and $39.96/month for the rest of your life. Heck, give us your credit card number, and you can register your dead grandma too. We don't care, we just need one more person to put on the left side of our network, and you'll get a $100 bonus. And, if you act today, we'll throw in 2 free nights in Vegas! (Sorry Mr. Nugent, don't take it personally, I just don't like your company! Oh, and Mr. Nugent, have you ever had to stay at the Holiday Inn in Paris? I don't think you'd like it...)	Personal Travel

1971	JERRY TAPP	Joystar hates card mills! Before ever mentioning the Joystar name, in the same breath, grouping, or comparing Joystar with YTB, please check the facts. There are only 2 people in the world who ever called Joystar anything other than a PROFESSIONAL HOST AGENCY and they were and still are very mistaken. If anyone does the research, they will find out that Joystar is not, will not be, nor has ever been a card mill, MLM, nor encourages their agents to simply sell themselves their own travel or to refer people to a website for fulfillment. It is simply not true. I have been with 2 hosts prior to Joystar, and researched Joystar for over a year prior to joining them because they have the one of best programs, support, and vision. I challenge anyone and everyone to provide just a hint of real evidence to prove Joystar is anything other than a very strong fast growing professional host agency.

2489	Nita Gesner, CTC, DS	It is irritating when their clients call our agency to obtain information such as whether or not a visa is required, general destination information, etc., when their AGENT should have been the one advising them. Usually "their friend, the agent" doesn't have a clue! I always refer them back to their own booking source. I think the public should be more educated about the importance of booking with qualified professionals in this business to protect their investment because travel is an investment in their well being. I also feel the general public has the misconception that all travel agencies are somehow subsidized by the government; therefore, it's okay for them to call us to obtain general information with regards to travel. They don't understand that we operate in a competitive business world and need to make money to survive. Because of this, we do our best to provide the best customer service so that we can retain our clientele. It is not a "hobby" for us.

Safe to say about 5% were YTBer's networking either walking around or with open displays indicating the easyness to be a travel agent. Flashing ID cards, intrupting when I was talking to potential clients, my way was old fashioned, you did not have to look out for your clients interest and trainiing was not needed. Along with this they were offering lower than the standard cruise prices by providing kickbacks. They also indicated that CLIA training was a waste of money. I have owned a franchise for over 6 years before I became comfortable that I had enough knowledge to start my own LLC. Most of that knowledge come through some form of CLIA training via the corporation or individual training. In order to provide the best to your customers you need to invest in experience and training. To: US Travel Associations and Travel Vendors

The following people, being vested in the travel industry in varying positions as employees, managers, owners and clients wish to voice a strong opposition to the recent influx and acceptance of MLM "travel agencies" such as YTB and others with a similar program.

The Associations and the Vendors who support these business models are at risk of losing the traditional travel agent as a supporter.

Many agents have invested much time and effort to learn how to sell travel and how to serve travelers. The MLM model is in the business of selling credentials with a minimum of any professional commitment or training. These programs simply abuse any vendor incentives. The MLM management encourages their agents to simply sell themselves their own and to refer people to a website for fulfillment.

Their average "agent" in July 2007 earned less than $70 for the month. Most of their "agents" are merely paying for a site to obtain discounts (rebating commissions) and industry perks to which they may not be entitled.

The purpose of this petition is to encourage the travel vendors, associations and consumers to take a stand and not support these types of operations. If the MLM organizations are allowed to continue, the vendors and associations need to differentiate these organizations from a traditional agent. By allowing them to claim professionalism, credentials, and unearned benefits, merely cheapens the experience of travel.

Sincerely,

The Undersigned
